

Archant

Independent Press Standards Organisation Annual Report

Period covered: 2016

Factual Information about the Regulated Entity

Archant publishes 64 regulated newspapers, 69 magazines, about 200 websites, about 140 apps and almost 1,000 further e-editions.

For a breakdown of published newspaper and magazine titles and associated websites see appendix one. Circulation figures for these titles are available to the regulator on request.

The apps are, in the main, Archant newspaper and magazine brand extensions or produced on behalf of clients. The e-editions are both related to the news and magazine brands as well as one-off publications.

Responsible Person

The regulated entity's responsible person is Tim Williams, managing editor, Archant

Overview

Archant is a privately owned media company serving geographical and specialist interest communities across a wide range of media and live events. It employs about 1,500 staff.

It is one of the largest regional newspaper publishers in the UK with titles in East Anglia, London, Kent and the South West, publishing about 1.4 million copies a week in print and reaching more than six million readers a month online. Its portfolio includes the Eastern Daily Press in Norfolk, the East Anglian Daily Times in Suffolk, the Ham & High in London and The New European.

Archant is the largest publisher of regional and local lifestyle magazines and associated digital media in the UK. It also owns a range of specialist magazine titles circulating mainly in the UK and USA. Its portfolio of magazine titles reaches an average of more than three million readers every month across the UK in print and more than 1.3 million readers online.

Archant has a broad portfolio of digital media assets and marketing services supporting its more traditional media. In 2013 the group won a licence to broadcast television to the city of Norwich. The service, Mustard TV, has been broadcasting on Freeview since March 2014. It is also a prolific publisher of mobile apps on the Apple and Android platforms in the UK.

The group, which was founded in 1845, has its roots in Norwich where most of its back office functions are located and has frontline staff based in the communities that it serves across the UK.

Internal Guides

Archant has detailed guidelines for journalists in relation to how editorial staff carry out their work around story gathering, compliance with the Editors' Code of Practice, standards of behaviour, ethics, complaint handling and responsibilities to the public and the Independent Press Standards Organisation.

These guidelines are reviewed and updated annually to take account of regulatory requirements, changes to the law etc.

The relevant guidelines issued to all Archant journalists are attached in appendix two.

Compliance Procedures

Archant works hard to ensure that all articles it publishes comply with the Editors' Code of Practice.

Where necessary, editors and journalists seek advice from IPSO in advance of publishing articles to consider matters of compliance with the Editors' Code of Practice. This advice is then considered by senior Archant editorial staff and with reference to the public interest when refining and publishing any articles.

Journalists and editors take all appropriate steps to confirm articles in line with the rigorous standards laid out within Archant guidelines.

Copies of the Editors' Code of Practice are supplied to all Archant journalists who are contractually bound to abide by its guidelines. Journalists are advised to carry a copy with them at all times and the code is displayed in Archant newsrooms. A copy of the Editors' Code of Practice is also published on the Archant intranet/shared drive.

Where the Regulator finds against a publication in the course of assessing a complaint, the publication complies with the findings and any remedial action required.

Editorial Complaints

Archant has a standard complaints procedure for the public across all publications. This is publicised on the website of each title and is published in printed copies of newspapers and magazines.

Members of the public can lodge an editorial complaint under this procedure by following the steps online or by submitting a complaint in writing to a named individual or to the address of the publication.

Additionally, the Archant complaints process (see appendix three) means that complaints about editorial content that are received in any other way (ie: in person, by telephone or via email or letter) are also handled promptly and escalated when appropriate to try to ensure a swift resolution for the complainant.

Complaints received in line with the published procedure, or referred from IPSO, are logged on the Archant editorial complaints database and assessed by a senior editor, who will seek to resolve the matter with the complainant. Non-editorial complaints are logged and referred to the relevant department/person.

Where IPSO finds against an Archant publication when determining a complaint, the publication complies with the findings and any remedial action required by the Regulator.

Archant's complaints process also ensures that all complaints that have IPSO involvement are shared with the company's board at each meeting.

Training of Staff

Archant regularly organises training sessions to update relevant staff on regulatory changes, law changes, complaint handling, customer service, editorial standards and company editorial guidelines.

New joiners are supplied with a copy of the Editors' Code of Practice at their company induction.

Following the January 2016 revisions to the Editors' Code of Practice all journalists were provided with guidance around the changes relating to the importance of headlines being supported by the wording in the article.

Relevant staff have also been briefed on the code's update of the definition of the public interest in terms of its compliance with defamation and data protection laws.

To reflect the introduction of a stand-alone clause relating to suicide, journalists were briefed on the necessity to avoid excessive detail about the methods used and were advised to refer to and be familiar with the Samaritans' advice for media on reporting suicides.

All editorial staff were advised to be aware gender identity is now covered by the discrimination clause of the Editors' Code of Practice.

300 Archant editorial staff have also undergone e-training to cover the Editors' Code of Practice and IPSO requirements. Archant has signed a contract with the Press Association and Elisha training to deliver annual training which consists of ten video modules with associated questions. The training cannot be completed without successfully completing all the questions on each video module.

Adverse Adjudications

There was one adverse adjudication against Archant in 2016 following the publication of an article in the Hampstead and Highgate Express in February,
Full information about the ruling can be seen here:

<https://www.ipso.co.uk/rulings-and-resolution-statements/ruling/?id=02182-16>

A copy of the front-page apology is attached in appendix four.

Following the ruling editorial staff received guidance on the Archant requirement that contemporaneous notes that form the basis for articles are kept for a minimum period of 18 months.

Despite the fact the complainant was subsequently convicted of using racially abusive words or behaviour in the incident that formed the basis of the article (see appendix five), a lack of notes meant our journalism fell short of the standards required in this instance.

A report of the court case can be seen here:

Archant editorial guidelines for journalists

INTRODUCTION

The aim of this document is to establish a clear sense of direction for all Archant journalists and all our journalism. This document will form part of the induction process which all editorial staff undergo on joining the company, as well as being a 'user manual' and guide for our existing journalists.

This will ensure we all have a clear understanding of our roles, corporate objectives and are fully aware of our responsibilities to the company, readers and the regulator.

Specific local title or product plans and style sheets will be produced to provide guidelines for each newspaper, magazine, website or range of titles to ensure all editorial staff are aware of target markets, the aims of their particular products and their title's individual style, design and identity.

The standards around ethics and how we operate will be the same wherever we work and whatever we do in print or in the digital environment.

Our ability to work in and support the communities in which we publish newspapers, magazines and websites is dependant on trust.

That trust is based on our ability to deliver fair, accurate, challenging and campaigning journalism. This is not always easy and relies on sound judgments in an often highly pressured environment.

These guidelines are designed give anyone gathering, creating or presenting editorial content a clear understanding of Archant's approach as an innovative, responsible and accountable community media business.

They are to be used in conjunction with and to support the Editors' Code of Practice, which every Archant journalist is contractually bound to uphold at all times.

We will review and update these guidelines as and when appropriate.

Editorial

It is our intention always to ensure our products strive for excellence and are superior to our competitors in quality, consistency, reliability of content, ethics and design, that we are responsive to the needs of our readers and are aware of the role our advertisers play in the community, publicising their services or activities where appropriate.

We should build relationships within the community which are strong enough to withstand adverse publicity as we exercise our role of reporting without fear or favour.

We must always aim to offer best value for money.

We must strive to ensure the highest standards of journalistic quality and integrity and ethical behaviour are maintained and that the freedom of the media is upheld.

We must be positive in how we want Archant's journalists to be seen by others

VALUES

All we do must be accomplished on the basis of meeting the following criteria:

- Fairness
- Accuracy
- Balance
- Honesty
- Integrity
- Absence of malice, fear or favour

Every story must measure up to this test. If it fails on any count, it needs further checks and balances and should not be published until it does meet the criteria.

Accuracy and balance are at the heart of everything we do. Being accurate and balanced in our reporting earns us the trust of our audiences.

Accuracy begins with interviewing and note-taking. Notes must be contemporaneous, or, if that is not possible, written up as soon after the interview/event as practicable. All notes must be kept for reference for a minimum period of one year.

If electronic devices are used to record interviews the interviewee should be asked for consent, with the name and any relevant details of the interviewee being recorded at the beginning of the interview. The date and time of interview should also be recorded. The recording should be kept for reference for a minimum period of one year.

Facts form the key part of any accurate report. When reporting any allegation, Archant journalists should not rely on a single source. In any story carrying allegations, however minimal they may appear, facts must be cross-checked and, if appropriate, legal advice sought prior to publication.

When using eyewitnesses, care must be taken to ensure what is being said is accurate and has not been exaggerated. It is advisable to have two eyewitness accounts that corroborate events. When running breaking news online, if we have not been able to corroborate facts or events being reported elsewhere, we should make this clear and update the article as soon as possible.

These guidelines apply to all our news channels: Digital and print.

OBJECTIVES

The following will form the aims and objectives of the editorial department. They will dovetail into the overall company strategy as defined in our Strategic Plan.

- To provide a first-class service of news, comment, features and advertising for people in the markets in which we operate.
- To use our journalistic skills to exploit the potential for information within our market with products of the highest quality matched to clearly identified consumer needs.
- To recognise and fulfil our responsibilities to the communities we serve.

- To satisfy the need for useful and diverting information by providing a service which is superior to competitors in depth, variety and reliability.
- To provide a forum for, and to lead debate on, matters of interest to the community.
- To provide successful vehicles for local and national advertisers in whichever medium, channel or format is most appropriate.
- To be better than competitors by producing a range of quality products which accurately match the needs of the market place.
- To be resourceful in meeting competition when it arises.
- To maintain and encourage a culture of excellent reader and customer care within the editorial team.
- To develop a system of monitoring to ensure the highest standards of quality, accuracy, fairness and balance are maintained.
- To provide a clear reason why readers and advertisers should choose to use and buy our products and services.
- To ensure we have a culture which is flexible and responsive to the changing needs of the marketplace.
- To uphold and defend the freedom of the media, observe the editors' Code of Practice and always meet the requirements of the Independent Press Standards Organisation in an effort to ensure legislation curtailing media freedom is not introduced.

CUSTOMER CARE

Complaints

On receiving any complaint in relation to published material or the behaviour of journalists the Archant complaints process must be followed. The complaint should be immediately reviewed and a written/email response provided within 48 hours where appropriate under the guidelines of the complaints process. All correspondence relating to the complaint must be archived in the Archant editorial complaints database where required under the Archant complaints process.

Should a printed correction/clarification be required it must:

- 1) Be approved by the editor or appropriate senior manager
- 2) Appear in a suitably prominent position. The public are rightly critical when we make an error on page three and then publish the apology/correction on page 17.

In the event that a complaint is more likely than not to lead to legal action the following procedure must be followed:

- The relevant editor and Archant's IPSO responsible person or chief content officer must be informed
- The company insurers, Hiscox, must be informed immediately and all correspondence forwarded to them, with a copy to the company secretary
- All staff involved in the article should be spoken to to confirm versions of events, facts, timescales etc. All notes, emails and correspondence relating to the complaint should be collected and archived in the Archant editorial complaints database.

- The financial director must be informed by the editor in order that any financial provisions can be made.
- Any contact with the complainant should only be made after consultation with Archant's insurers or lawyers instructed on our behalf.
- Any apology/statement required as the result of a successful action for defamation or agreed as a resolution to a complaint must be published in accordance with the court ruling/agreement.

In general terms, all complaints will be dealt with promptly, courteously and with understanding and in line with the Archant editorial complaints process.

All staff, when receiving a complaint by telephone, must always thank the caller for alerting us to the issue.

Take the name, email address and telephone numbers of complainants. In line with the Archant editorial complaints process, pass the complaint to a relevant manager, where appropriate immediately or, if they are not available, promise a return call at the earliest opportunity.

When dealing with a complaint in person, on the telephone or via email or letter, journalists must try to see the issue from the complainant's point of view. Don't be defensive or form judgements until you know all the facts.

All complaints must be investigated thoroughly and with speed and in line with the Archant editorial complaints process. Never ignore a complaint: it could be a lost reader or customer and is poor service. It may also fall foul of our contractual obligations to the Independent Press Standards Organisation.

Where a complaint has been investigated and a correction or apology is considered appropriate, this must be referred to a relevant editor before publication.

A note outlining the background to the circumstances and the complaint will be expected from staff concerned prior to a correction or apology being published and details should be archived on the Archant editorial complaints database.

Where we are wrong, it is our duty to correct the mistake and apologise publicly and promptly.

With some complaints there is no hard and fast right or wrong. In these grey areas the complainant can often be satisfied either by a letter for publication stating his or her views, or a further article.

The Independent Press Standards Organisation (IPSO)

It is Archant policy (and indeed we are bound by contract) to adhere to the Editors' Code of Practice and to abide by decisions from the Independent Press Standards Organisation. All Archant editorial staff are required to be familiar with the Editors' Code of Practice – and to ensure it is followed at all times.

All journalists are advised to carry a copy of the code with them at all times for ease of reference.

Schools road rage warning

Emily Banks
emily.banks@archant.co.uk

Police have stepped up patrols outside schools in Hampstead - after reports of a spate of road rage incidents during school run times.

Pc Edward Bromilow, of the Frogna and Fitzjohns safer neighbourhoods team, said: "We are continuing our on/off presence outside the schools around Fitzjohn's, less so for the parent crime and more so for traffic issues, as I have been made aware of a few road rage reports."

"There have been a couple of incidents over the last few weeks, I think it's to do with the surrounding roads being very, very busy."

Pc Bromilow ticked off those involved. He said: "This isn't needed at all, especially when children are involved."

The area around Fitzjohns Avenue and Arkwright Road is a notorious school run blackspot with the high concentration of schools.

Each day during term time hundreds of parents in cars descend on the area in the morning and mid-afternoon to pick up and drop off their children and fight over a limited number of parking spaces.

Camden council attempted to address school run traffic in Hampstead by setting up a scrutiny panel in 2002. Parents used to be given parking permits allowing them to park for 15 minutes outside schools during pick up and drop off times however Camden Council withdrew the scheme in 2006 in a bid to encourage families to walk to school or use public transport.

Traffic still however remains a problem in the surrounding streets with tempers flaring.

Pc Bromilow warned: "If I do come across anyone acting like this I will take appropriate action for any offences made out."

EDUCATION

■ A march was held in London

Angry teachers walk out

Schools across Camden, Haringey and Barnet were fully or partially closed as teachers took to the streets to protest.

Thousands of striking teachers chanted: "No ifs, no buts, no education cuts."

They took part in a rally through London, and protesters spoke to the Ham&High about the decision to take industrial action.

Teachers claim schools are stretched and suffering from funding cuts.

For a special report on the strikes, turn to pages 6 and 7.

Herminio Martinez: An apology

Our front page story of February 11 quoted community campaigner Herminio Martinez as "admitting to the Ham & High" that he had used the word 'Shylock' to describe developers planning to build luxury flats at the Richardson's site in Highgate. We would like to point out that this is not so. Mr Martinez did not speak to our reporter at the time and the 'Shylock' reference referred to a conversation he had with one of the developers at a consultation event last year. Mr Martinez did not use the word in an anti-Semitic sense and we accept that no such meaning was intended on his part.
